

Result: If the particles are all moving in the same direction before they hit the slit, then most of them will continue in the same direction after passing through the slit. When they hit the screen there will be two bright spots where lots of particles hit. A few particles might just graze either edge of either slit, so there will be a few particles outside the two spots, but only two spots.